

Using different perspectives can help with creating clarity and identifying where your opportunities are. You can use the below questions or adapt the questions to suit what you need to create clarity on.

Imagine your work colleagues are being interviewed for an article about you as a leader, what would they say about you?

Imagine people external to your business are being interviewed for an article about you as a leader, what would you they say about you?

Imagine you are being interviewed for an article about you as a leader, what would you say?

If you could edit what was said, what would you change?

What do you want to do with this new clarity?